It's time to Get the Nation Learning

Learning and Work Institute launched the Get the Nation Learning campaign for a simple reason. When adults learn, our society and economy thrive. This exciting new campaign builds on our thirty-year legacy of running Festival of Learning, the biggest celebration of adult learning in England.

Everyone has a role to play. Local and regional government, employers, learning providers, community organisations. By acting together, we can move towards being a culture, society and economy where everyone can learn throughout life.

Lifelong learning has never been more important

Growth, productivity, good work, resilient communities, fuller and richer lives. These are just some of the benefits lifelong learning can bring.

Despite this, investment and participation in adult learning has declined dramatically in the last decade, with large inequalities in who accesses learning opportunities.

As changes in technology leave us all needing new skills and know-how for life inside and outside of work, levels of learning cannot continue to languish.

It's time to turn the tide. It's time to get the nation learning.

Since launching in May 2025, Get the Nation Learning has gone from strength to strength. The campaign has approached 200 organisations signed up as supporters – including the likes of Channel 4, Age UK, National Housing Federation, Sellafield, and the Association of Colleges. The campaign was also covered in national, local and trade press in its first year and attracted support from both MPs and Peers.
